Re: FOIA Identification No. 08-152

Dear Mr. Farmer:

Our office has been forwarded a copy of your Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request dated January 15, 2008, in reference to "the CMII Master Interview Index with Thumbnails Operation Noble Eagle for the Operation Noble Eagle project conducted by the Army Center for Military History. This project is a collection of interviews relative to the events of September 11, 2001 and the attack on the Pentagon." Your request was provided to the Historical Resources Branch, The U.S. Army Center of Military History. That office subsequently forwarded it to our office for review. We received your request on February 4, 2008, and assigned it our office tracking number, FA-08-152.

We have reviewed the available documents and enclose them to you with partial redactions. The partial redactions encompass information that is considered exempt from disclosure under Title 5 United States Code Section 552 (b)(2) and (b)(6). The withholdings and redactions are summarized below.

Exemption (b)(2): Critical infrastructure information may be withheld under a "high" Exemption (b)(2) analysis where the requested document is: (1) predominately internal, and (2) its disclosure risks circumvention of agency regulation or statutes. Crooker v. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms, 670 F.2d 1051, 1074 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (en banc). An internal document is one that "does not purport to regulate activities among members of the public . . . [and] does [not] set standards to be followed by agency personnel in deciding whether to proceed against or to take action affecting members of the public." Cox v. U.S. Dep't of Justice, 601 F.2d 1, 5 (D.C. Cir. 1979) (per curiam). Whether there is any public interest in disclosure is legally irrelevant under this interpretation of Exemption (b)(2). See Voinche v. FBI, 940 F. Supp. 323, 328 (D.D.C. 1996), aff'd per curiam, No. 96-5304, 1997 WL 411685, at *1 (D.C. Cir. June 19, 1997). Rather, the concern is that disclosure should not "benefit those attempting to violate the law and avoid detection." Crooker, 670 F.2d at 1054. Thus, the second part of the Crooker test is properly satisfied by a showing that disclosure would risk circumvention of general legal requirements. See, e.g., Nat'l Treasury Employees Union v. U.S. Customs Serv., 802 F.2d 525, 530-31 (D.C. Cir. 1986) (holding that "[w]here disclosure of a particular [record] would render [it] operationally useless, the Crooker analysis is satisfied whether or not the agency identifies a specific statute or regulation threatened by disclosure).

Exemption (b)(2) is invoked to protect sensitive internal agency information from security breaches and harm. See FOIA Post, "New Attorney General FOIA Memorandum Issued" (posted 10/15/01) (placing primary emphasis on availability of protection for homeland security-related information under Exemption (b)(2)). In this case, the documents you requested include government room and suite numbers. Government room and suite numbers are predominately internal in that they do not purport to regulate activities among members of the public, nor do they set standards to be followed by agency personnel in deciding whether to proceed against or to take action affecting members of the public. See Cox, 601 F.2d at 5. Further, release of such information could result in security breaches and harm. Accordingly, government room numbers and suite numbers are withheld.

Exemption (b)(6): Exemption (b)(6) of the FOIA protects from mandatory disclosure "personnel and medical files the disclosure of which would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of privacy." 5 U.S.C. § 552(b)(6) (1996 & Supp. I 2002). To qualify for protection under Exemption (b)(6), records must meet two criteria: (1) they must be "personnel and medical files and similar files," (2) the disclosure of which "would constitute a clearly unwarranted invasion of personal privacy." Id.; U.S. Dep't of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. 595, 599-603 (1982). Regarding the first prong, the Supreme Court has held that this standard is met merely if the information "applies to a particular individual." U.S. Dep't of State v. Washington Post Co., 456 U.S. at 602. The second prong requires courts to strike a "balance between the protection of an individual's right to privacy and the preservation of the public's right to Government information." Id. at 599. The "public interest" in the analysis is limited to the "core purpose" for which Congress enacted the FOIA: to "shed . . . light on an agency's performance of its statutory duties." U.S. Dep't of Justice v. Reporters Comm. for Freedom of the Press, 489 U.S. 749, 773 (1989).

We are withholding the names of government employees under Exemption (b)(6) to protect personal privacy. See Judicial Watch, Inc. v. United States, No. 03-1160, 2004 WL 26736, at *4 (4th Cir. Jan. 6, 2004). The first prong has been met on face for the names since refer to particular individuals. Under the Exemption (b)(6) balancing test established for prong two, disclosing the names of government employees in these documents would contribute little to the public's understanding of government procurement practice. Compared to a "not insubstantial" invasion of privacy interests that disclosure would constitute, there is little public interest in the names of government employees absent specific allegations of corruption or illegality. Judicial Watch, Inc. v. United States, No. 03-1160, 2004 WL 26736, at *4 (4th Cir. Jan. 6, 2004) (citing U.S. Dep't of Defense v. Fed. Labor Relations Auth., 510 U.S. 487, 500 (1994)).

Furthermore, Department of Defense policy following September 11, 2001, allows the withholding of the names and room numbers of government employees "because of a heightened interest in the personal privacy of DoD personnel that is concurrent with the increased security awareness demanded in times of national emergency." Memorandum from D.O. Cooke, Director of Administration & Management, Office of the Secretary of Defense, Re: Withholding of Personally Identifying Information under the Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) (Nov. 9, 2001), available at <http://www.dod.mil/pubs/foi/withhold.pdf>. As such, the names of government employees are withheld under Exemption (b)(6).

We are releasing the requested document to you in full. Please note that no charge has been assessed in this case.

This partial denial is carried out as the representative of the FOIA Initial Denial Authority (IDA). The Administrative Assistant to the Secretary of the Army delegated Initial Denial Authority (IDA) under the FOIA to the Chief Attorney, to act for the Secretary of the Army on requests for records maintained by the U.S. Army Center for Military History. You have the right to appeal within sixty (60) calendar days. See 32 C.F.R. § 518.17(c). If you wish to appeal this determination, write to me and I will present the matter to the IDA for consideration.

If you have any questions regarding this letter or the information furnished, please contact the undersigned at (703) 697-5423 or jose.burgos@hqda.army.mil and refer to FOIA identification number 08-152.

Sincerely,

Jose L. Burgos
